

(57) Abstract

The present invention relates to a method for controlling the sending of messages in a communication system. The method comprises providing a network entity with restriction information associated with terminating parties in the communication system. The method further comprises determining at least one terminating party for a message to be sent and controlling sending of the message based on the restriction information.

(Fig. 2)